*HOTEL ASTOR, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER
FIFTEENTH, NINETEEN HUNDRED TEN*

Greeting: At this, our annual banquet, it is our chief aim, as the representative club of Canadians in the United States, to advance the project now on foot in this country and Great Britain of celebrating in 1914, in some befitting manner, the hundred years of peace that has existed between these two great nations.

Fairness, fearlessness and honesty were the foundations that made this long peace possible. It seems indeed singularly fitting that a commemorative tablet of this great fact be fitted for the minds and enlightenment of the civilized nations of the world. The foundation on which these amicable relations are being maintained is upon feelings of mutual esteem and also upon the principles of justice, mercy and truth.

Let us hope that these two nations may pass down through the centuries of time hand-in-hand and in harmony promoting all that tends toward the moral elevation and betterment of mankind.

NEIL MACPHATTER.

The Peace Centennial

O Peace benign! Thy triumphs far transcend
All that the crimson fields of war can claim;
With thy bright trophies joy and plenty blend,
No gory tracings stain thy march to fame.

And we, whose fathers erstwhile fought and bled
In ranks opposed, each for the seeming right:
By ties of kinship and blessed friendship led,
Rejoice at long-continued peace tonight.

Our hopes, ideals and our speech the same,
Heirs of the triumphs of a thousand years;
Oh! May the future ever blend our fame
In righting wrongs and drying human tears.

Conjoined, our veto would prohibit war,
At our behests peace soon would reign supreme,
And blood-stained fields the earth no longer mar,
While war's dread pageantry became a dream.
