OBSERVATIONS :

NO provision whatever was made for the renewal of these Leases, which were only made for twenty-one years, and would have fallen into government in three or four years ; and it was at the repeated solicitation of the holders that the governor was induced to renew them, that the parties might not have to complain of an insecure tenure. It is also proper to remark, that the instrument of renewal given to these parties is a Grant, renewable every thirty years

Leases, for the last Ten Years ; stating the Amount under each head in each Year, and the particulars of each Lease renewed reserved by the former and present Leases, the Amount of the Fine upon each Renewal, and the Fee paid for each Lease.

years for ever, at the option of the holder, but not to take effect till the expiration of the original lease, of which the conditions remain inviolable till such expiration. In some of the cases herein detailed, ground occupied by two persons under one lease to one party, has, on renewal, been divided into two lots, on the mutual request of such parties, and the fines apportioned agreeable to their own arrangement. The fines fixed at two years rent.

N° 33.

Copy of a LETTER from the Commissioners of the SIXPENNY DUTY to John Barrow, Esq. dated 26th June 1823, transmitting an Account of the Amount of all Monies received for the use of Greenwich Hospital from the Fishermen; distinguishing, if possible, those fishing in open Boats on the Coast of Newfoundland, for the last Ten Years; stating the Gross Amount collected, the Poundage paid for Collection, the Names of the Collector and his Deputies, and the Net Amount paid into Greenwich Hospital, in each Year.

SIR, Sixpenny Duty Office, Tower Hill, 26th June 1823.

IN obedience to their Lordships directions, as signified to us by your letter of 22d instant, we now transmit to you in triplicate, a Return, assimilated as much as possible to the one required by the precept of the Honourable House of Commons, but the books of this Office do not enable us to distinguish accurately between Fishing and other Vessels, and they afford no means whatever of distinguishing open Boats. Those Vessels included under the head of Boats, in the Return, may be considered as generally employed in the Fishery of Newfoundland; those under the head of Ships, comprise fishing and all other Vessels which have paid at Newfoundland.

We presume that the precept applies to the Fishery of Newfoundland alone; but as the words may bear reference to fishermen in general, it may be proper to observe, that it would be impossible to make any satisfactory selection of the fishing vessels that may have paid in various parts of the kingdom, from the mass of accounts in which they are intermixed with others.

We have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient Servants,

John Barrow, esq. (signed) C. Kinsey.
, &c. &c. &c. R. H. Hay.

AN ACCOUNT of all Monies received for the use of GREENWICH HOSPITAL, by P. C. Le Geyt, Esq. Secretary to the Commander in Chief at Newfoundland, for the last Ten Years; stating the Gross Amount collected, the Poundage paid for collecting, and Net Amount paid into the Hospital in each Year.

Those Vessels under the head of Ships, comprise Fishing and all other Vessels which have paid the Sixpenny Duty. Those under the head of Boats, may be considered as generally employed in the Fishery, but there are no means of distinguishing open Boats.

A REPORT of the State of NEWFOUNDLAND, for the information of the Right honourable Earl BATHURST, Principal Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, &c. &c. &c.

THE Committee of the inhabitants of St. John's Newfoundland, in consequence of being informed, from the highest authority, that it is in the contemplation of His Majesty's government, to make a revision of the laws of this country, consider it their duty to communicate to your Lordship their view of the present state of the island; the causes that have led to it; and most respectfully to recommend the adoption of such measures, as they deem best calculated to lessen the accumulated evils under which the country now labours.

Preliminary to their Report, the committee beg leave to call the attention of your Lordship to the petition of the inhabitants of this town to our most gracious Sovereign, forwarded by his Excellency the Governor the early part of last year. With the most painful sensations, the committee, in common with the other petitioners, observed a report of a discussion which took place in the House of Lords last session, wherein your Lordship is stated to have said, "that inquiry had been made into the allegations contained in the petition, and that they were found, in many instances, grossly exaggerated." The petitioners, yielding to no body of men in the empire in attachment, loyalty and veneration to their beloved Sovereign, most sensibly feel the imputation cast on them.

The committee are not aware of the sources from whence your Lordship derived your information, but had your Lordship required from the petitioners' explanation respecting the various subjects contained in the petition, they had it in their power most fully to prove the facts stated in the petition. They were of recent occurrence, and too well known and glaring, to be controverted by ex parte statements. The petitioners complain of the delay in passing the Act for the rebuilding the town of St. John, and of the great inconvenience, and the loss that arose therefrom; of the manner in which justice is administered in the subordinate courts; and of the incompetency of the persons who generally presided therein. They referred to a number of cases then recently decided; the case of Crawford and Co's insolvency, where from the surrogate's utter ignorance of the laws, which he was sworn to administer, an immense loss accrued to the creditors of that firm residing here; the unparalleled case of Londregan, so inhumanly flogged by the orders of Captain Buchan and the Reverend Mr. Leigh; and the case of Baird versus Long and Jennings; the most glaring features of the latter case were suppressed, as it was proved in the supreme court, that the surrogate before whom that case was heard, gave a judgment according to previous instructions received from his Excellency the Governor, Governor, without inquiring into the law or merits of the case; and these two industrious men were ruined, without the possibility of obtaining legal redress. The petitioners further state, that the naval surrogates were in the habit of exacting Greenwich Hospital dues from fishermen in open boats, which is too notorious to require proof.

These are the facts stated in the petition, and the committee are not aware of exaggeration or misrepresentation; they were chiefly developed in the supreme court of the island, and the committee have only to refer to the records to prove their correctness in every particular.

The committee consider it a duty they owe the petitioners and themselves, thus far to explain their statements; they now beg leave to call the attention of your Lordship to the present state of Newfoundland, a country of great extent, the oldest of the British settlements in America, placed nearly in the same latitude as England, with a climate peculiarly favourable to the health of its inhabitants, possessing more of the elements of commerce than any other of the colonies of North America, and of the greatest importance to the parent state, not only as a valuable acquisition to the commercial interests of the empire, but as the best nursery for seamen to support the naval ascendancy of the empire; now, after the lapse of near three centuries, being almost in the same state as when first discovered by Cabot. With a population of one hundred thousand persons, without any certain mode of employment or subsistence, without a government efficient for any local purpose, without roads, without means of education for the people, without any of those institutions which are necessary for the government of every civilized country. The trade and fisheries, hitherto the chief support of the people, languishing for want of due encouragement.

The committee, in their endeavours to trace the causes that have led to the present state of things, have observed that it has been the constant and prevailing policy to view Newfoundland merely as a fishing establishment and a place of trade; this policy so long adopted towards this country, they do not hesitate to say, was the primary cause.

From the earliest period, the attention of the settlers, as well as transient persons, were exclusively turned towards the fisheries, and the commercial pursuits connected with them. They were the only source which the inhabitants looked up to for support, consequently they were subject to the vicissitudes of such uncertain employments; when the fisheries flourished, the inhabitants were enabled to obtain a comfortable subsistence; when they declined, they suffered in exact proportion to that decline; such have invariably been the situation of the people; and such ever will be their state, until they can get more certain means of employment than can be afforded by the fisheries. Merchants will only employ their capital as long as there is a fair prospect of gain; if that prospect be reversed, they will withdraw from the trade; and it forms no principal of mercantile economy to enquire how the people are to exist, by whose labour and industry in more prosperous times, they gained all their wealth and importance. If this mode of reasoning be true, in reference to trade in general, how much more applicable is it to the uncertain trade carried on in the fisheries of Newfoundland.

From the earliest period, the affairs of Newfoundland were mainly influenced by merchants residing in England, the trade and fisheries were a monopoly in their hands, to preserve which they exerted all their influence to prevent the improvement or settlement of the country, apprehensive that it would be fatal to their monopoly. They represented the soil as barren and incapable of improvement; the climate so extremely severe, as to render it uninhabitable; aware that it was a favourite object with government to increase the naval strength of the empire by the extension of the fisheries, they stated the moveable fishery carried on by themselves as the best to promote that object, and that the sedentary fishery of the natives would defeat it.

The parties thus interested in the trade, influenced government to second all their views; every obstacle was thrown in the way of settlement; a policy was pursued, and laws were formed, that had the direct tendency of preventing the cultivation of the soil, to which justly may be attributed the present wretched state of the island.

The government of Newfoundland was in a great degree placed in the hands of a few merchants, and it is not at all surprising that they were influenced by the same principles which had invariably governed merchants, in every age and country, to sacrifice every other interest to their own. Their object was to make money, and in the shortest time possible; this facility they found, during a long period of a profitable trade and successful fishery, to realize large fortunes, made them consider their residence in Newfoundland merely as a probation of a few years, after which they expected to be able to retire, and enjoy the fruits of their prosperous industry in other countries. Within the last thirty or forty years, a great number of persons have retired from this country, carrying with them large sums realized out of the trade and fisheries. Fortunes, of from 50, 100, 200 and 300,000 pounds, have been made by individuals who came to the island without a shilling, and who are now removed to other countries. It must appear evident, that such a continual drain of capital must have been most injurious to its interests; and it was only a country possessing an inexhaustible mine of wealth in her fisheries, that could permit such to take place.

The adventurers to the other colonies had the improvement and cultivation of the soil to look to as the chief source of wealth and commerce, and even if they were successful enough to realize a sufficient sum to enable them to retire, they could not bring their improvement along with them; the country was at least so much benefited by them.

The peculiar state of Newfoundland, where the labour and skill of the people being exclusively turned towards the fisheries, every other interest being sacrificed to them, permitted the adventurer to accumulate a fortune without making the slightest improvement. He remained in the country only a few months in the summer, he had no object in making improvements beyond what was necessary to protect his goods from the weather, until they were shipped off. It is well known, that the houses in which many of the persons lived, who made the largest fortunes in Newfoundland, were so mean, that the cottage of an English peasant would be considered a palace in comparison. These kind of houses are the improvements, if improvements they can be called, made in Newfoundland by the most wealthy merchants in the trade.

A variety of causes have operated within these few years, to interfere with the monopoly of the merchants. Notwithstanding the impediments thrown in the way, the population has very much increased; so many hands being employed in the fishery, cause the supply of fish very much to exceed the demand; the trade is very much divided, which keeps up a spirit of competition unfavourable to the old state of things. The important privileges granted to the French and Americans, to fish on the best part of our coasts, with the bounties and other encouragement they obtain from their respective governments, enable them to supply the foreign markets at a price much lower than the British, which cause a rivalry that our merchants cannot contend with. These causes have very much interfered with the monopoly so long in the hands of the merchants in the trade.

The committee having endeavoured to state the injuries arising to the country from the undue influence of the mercantile interest, they have now to request your Lordship's attention to the system of government, and the administration of justice which have so long prevailed, and which they consider a great source of evil.

Notwithstanding Newfoundland is one of the oldest possessions of His Majesty in America, a century has not elapsed since any thing like a regular government was established. At this late period, it rests in the hands of a Governor, being at the same time admiral, holding the chief naval command on the station; he appoints and removes at his pleasure, the judges of the surrogate courts (who are generally selected from the officers of his fleet) the magistrates, high sheriff, coroner, and every other officer under the Crown, with one or two exceptions; with so much unconstitutional authority, he has no legal power for any local purpose whatsoever; he may have the best intentions, but, under existing circumstances, it is utterly out of his power to do any thing for the improvement of the country, or the permanent good of the people, unless he acts on his own responsibility.

The Governors may have been inclined to do all the good their limited authority would permit, but in consequence of the absence of that regular and constitutional authority, which would at the same time advise what would tend to the honour of the Crown and the good of the country, they have had persons for advisers whose sole object was their own private advantage. As might be expected from such an order of things, a line of separation was drawn between the Governor and the inhabitants, and that confidence in the government, so much to be desired, did not exist in the minds of the people. They view the Governor, and those in authority under him, merely as persons whose sole object is to make as much as possible by their offices, and then leave the country, if not in a worse, not in a better situation than they found it. Under such a government, it is impossible for the country to advance in improvement or civilization. The committee have no doubt but your Lordship will see that it is a system of government that ought no longer to exist. As respects the defective manner in which justice is administered, the committee do not think it necessary to enter further on the subject, but to refer your Lordship to the petition of the inhabitants, and from the gracious reply of our most gracious sovereign, they have every confidence that the grievances they complain of will be removed.

The committee having endeavoured to trace the principal causes that have led to the present state of Newfoundland, they now beg to recommend to your Lordship, such measures as they confidently hope, if adopted, will lay the foundation of its future prosperity, and make it a more valuable appendage to the empire.

It is admitted by every person conversant with the affairs of Newfoundland, that the trade and fisheries are not capable of affording employment and subsistence to the large population that have grown up in the country. If not, it becomes a most important question to inquire how they are to be supported? In reply, the committee state, the soil affords ample means, and that it is only by its more general cultivation the present population can be maintained in the country. In Newfoundland there are millions of uncultivated acres, capable of producing food for a population much greater than it now contains. If agriculture were more generally encouraged, the country would afford a comfortable settlement, not only to the present population, but to a great proportion of those persons who now find their way to the United States. The committee are aware, a very general opinion has prevailed, that the produce of the soil is not adequate to the labour and expense of the cultivation, cultivation, than which nothing can be more illfounded, as every day's experience most fully disproves it. In no one instance where skill and industry have been employed in improving or clearing the soil, have they failed amply to repay the cultivator. In opposition to the great obstacles, fine farms have been cleared and successfully cultivated in the neighbourhood of St. John's, in Conception Bay, and in several parts of the island; manure can be obtained in the country with very little trouble; the offal of the fish mixed with the earth, is found to answer for all the purposes of husbandry; at present, instead of its being used for that purpose, the greater part is thrown back into the sea. With proper attention, most of the natural productions of England can be brought to perfection in this country. It is only on the margin of the coast that cultivation has been attempted, the interior remains unexplored, and there can remain but very little doubt, that there are many parts of the interior more favourable to agriculture than the sea coast. It is found, that the soil at the head of the large bays, which run a considerable distance into the country, is much more luxuriant and productive than the soil on the sea coast. As a proof of the advantages of cultivation, the committee would only refer to the respective situations of the labouring classes, the few, who even in the present backward state of agriculture, attended to their little farms, are in a comfortable situation, at least beyond want; while those who exclusively turned their labour towards the fisheries, are very little removed from pauperism.

Persons most obstinately opposed to the possibility of advantageously employing the soil of Newfoundland for the purposes of husbandry, admit that it is particularly favourable to the growth of potatoes and other esculent roots; an increase from twelve to twenty fold is the usual produce from the cultivation of the potatoe, and the quality not inferior to that of any other country. With proper encouragement, a sufficient quantity could be raised, which, with the abundance of fish to be had on every part of the coast, would supply the labouring classes with a wholesome nutritious food, which being the produce of their own labour, would make them independent of foreign supplies, at least for the necessities of life.

The causes which operated in the early stages of the fishery, to prevent the cultivation of the soil, have long since passed away, and it is now as much the interest of the merchant, as it is of the more resident part of the community, that every just encouragement should be given to the improvement and cultivation of the soil. The interest of all classes are the same; the prosperity of the one naturally leads to the prosperity of the other.

If the great body of the people of Newfoundland remain in their present state of beggary and want, it is an illusion if the trading part of the community expect to be much better in their condition. To enable the people to buy and pay for their goods, a proportion of their labour must be turned into some more productive channels than the fisheries can afford. The experience of the last eight years ought to be sufficient to convince the few merchants who remain in the country, and who were able to stem the overwhelming torrent which brought destruction on so many respectable houses, that the trade and fisheries of the country are not alone adequate to the support of the people; and if they follow up the old system of supplying in the fishery, their ruin is equally certain.

To enable the merchants of Newfoundland to cope with their rivals in foreign markets, fish must be caught at much less expense than hitherto, which cannot be done as long as every thing necessary for the maintenance of the people must be imported from distant countries. By the more general cultivation of the soil, the people would be enabled to raise a great proportion of their food; it would afford profitable employment for that part of the population who cannot be employed in the fishery; and it would be far the most effectual and best auxiliary to it. It is well worth the trial.

The committee, therefore, recommend this most important subject to the consideration of your Lordship; and they again repeat, that it is by a more general cultivation of the soil alone, that the present population can be supported in the island.

The committee are aware, that many years must elapse, even with due encouragement, before Newfoundland can make much progress in agriculture. It is now a trading country, and the encouragement of its trade and fisheries must always be a paramount consideration; they are the great source of wealth, which if made available to the interest of the country, will lay the foundation of its future prosperity. It has been said, that the fisheries of Newfoundland are mines of national wealth, superior to those of Mexico and Peru; other countries have reaped the advantage of them, it yet remains for this country to participate in their benefits.

Owing to the right of fishing granted to the French at the close of the last war, and to the Americans, by the treaty of 1818, the advantages of these great fisheries, are, in a great degree, lost to the subjects of Great Britain. The French and American governments give bounties and other encouragements to their fisheries on this coast. The fish caught on this coast by the subjects of these powers, can be sold in every market on much lower terms than fish caught by British subjects. If they be not put on a footing with the subjects of these powers, the advantages they possess over the British, must have the effect of sapping the foundation of the trade, and subverting the fisheries altogether.

The

The committee are aware, that many other subjects might be recommended for the improvement of the country, but they are impressed with the conviction, that to be beneficial they must emanate from a local government that would sympathize with the wants and wishes of the people. It is only under such a government that the country can improve; it would foster the resources of the country, educate and civilize the people. No country, ancient or modern, improved without the aid of a local government; it cannot be expected that Newfoundland can form an exception to the past and present state of the world. Considerable improvement has taken place in the intelligence of the people of Newfoundland; they are every day getting more enlightened; they see that the cause which has led to their present degraded state, is the want of a local government that would watch over the interests of the country.

The committee considered it unnecessary to adduce further arguments to your Lordship, so distinguished as a statesman and legislator, to prove the advantage and necessity of a government formed on the basis of the constitution of England.

It has been said, that the people of Newfoundland are not in a situation to pay the expenses necessarily attending a local government. The committee have no hesitation in saying, that such is not the case; and have not the slightest doubt of the competency of the country, even in its present depressed state, without inconvenience, to bear all the expenses necessary for that purpose. It has been a favourite object with interested persons to throw a cloud of misrepresentation on every thing connected with the country; its resources were little known, except to those who were making them subservient to their interest.

If Newfoundland have not possessed the means of paying the expense of a civil government, it must appear extraordinary that so many persons who came there without a shilling in their pockets were able, in the course of a few years, to realize fortunes, to retire from the island, and live in splendor in other countries. The committee can now point out to your Lordship individuals residing in London, Poole, Dartmouth, Bristol, Edinburgh, Greenock, Cork and Waterford, and other parts not alone of the United Kingdom, but even in the United States of America, who made their properties in Newfoundland. If individuals could in few years realize from the labour and industry of the people sufficient to enable them to retire from the country to live independently in other countries, surely it is not too much for the committee to say, that the same people can pay the expenses of their government which would revert back on themselves with manifold advantages.

To prove the ability of the inhabitants to pay the expense of their government, the committee beg to state a few well known facts: The town of St. John's is the capital of the island, and the principal depositary for the supplies and productions of the fishery; the ground on which the stores, wharfs and dwelling-houses are erected, is chiefly owned by persons residing in Great Britain, whose ancestors gained a title to it merely by occupying it for the purposes of the fishery; in consequence of the great increase of trade and population, the ground has become valuable, and the rent now charged for that situate at the waterside of Saint John's, is from 20 to 40s. per foot, on which large sums have been expended by the tenants in making the necessary erections; a sum not less than 30,000 £. is annually remitted from the town of Saint John's for rents; can it then be doubted that a people, who pay such large sums to absentee landlords, who do not contribute in the slightest degree to the support of the country, could pay the expenses of a civil government?

It is well known, that the mercantile houses, which accumulated all their capital in this trade, have in prosperous times, made profits of from 20 to 30,000 pounds in one year, a sum more than adequate to the support of a civil government.

The committee beg further to state to your Lordship, that the people of Newfoundland have been paying for many years duties on spirits and wine, out of which a considerable revenue has arisen; also a considerable revenue is raised from the rents of the public ship-rooms let under the authority of the Act 51 Geo. 3. c. 45. with the rents for lands in the vicinity of Saint John's, let out for the purposes of agriculture, for which from 2s. 6d. to 20s. per acre is annually obtained. Considerable additions will be made to the revenue of the country from the duties on foreign goods that may be imported under the free port Act. There are many other sources of revenue which could be resorted to without inconvenience, and which there can be little doubt would enable the country amply to pay the charges of a civil government.

Local governments have been ceded to the Canadas, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Bermuda, and some of the most inconsiderable islands in the West Indies, while Newfoundland, of equal importance to the parent state, the most ancient of her possessions in America, is deprived of its advantages.

The committee in concluding their Report, beg most respectfully and earnestly to press on your Lordship, the necessity of a government such as they recommend. Nothing else can be of much service to the country, or satisfy the just wishes of the people.

The

The committee have been informed, that it is the intention of his Excellency the Governor to recommend to your Lordship, that a governor and council should be appointed with legislative powers, such an unconstitutional government would be most obnoxious, and the people would prefer remaining in their present state. The committee, therefore, most humbly request, that your Lordship will not give your sanction to such a system of government.
